

60 Christmas "Who's Most Likely To" Questions for Adults

Once the kids are in bed and the eggnog is out, the questions can get a little bolder. These 60 are cheeky rather than crude — think mistletoe, texting your ex, and the guest who's still dancing after the host goes to sleep.

Perfect for friendsmas, a grown-up holiday party, or the after-party where the real stories come out.

How to play

1. Paper version: one person reads a question out loud. On the count of three, everyone points at the person they think fits best. Whoever gets the most fingers pointed at them "wins" that round (and has to explain themselves).
2. Phone version: open Sleigh Night on a TV or laptop. Guests scan the QR code and vote secretly on their phones. The TV reveals the results with a drumroll, and anyone who voted with the majority scores points.
3. At the end everyone gets a funny award based on how the room voted — "Most likely to burn the cookies" makes a great screenshot.

Tips for a great round

- Set a house rule: whoever "wins" a round has to tell the story — or take a sip.
- Read the room. If someone looks uncomfortable, skip to the next question.
- Secret phone votes make bolder questions more fun, because nobody knows who voted for whom.
- Save the spiciest questions for the end of the night.
